A Casino Story

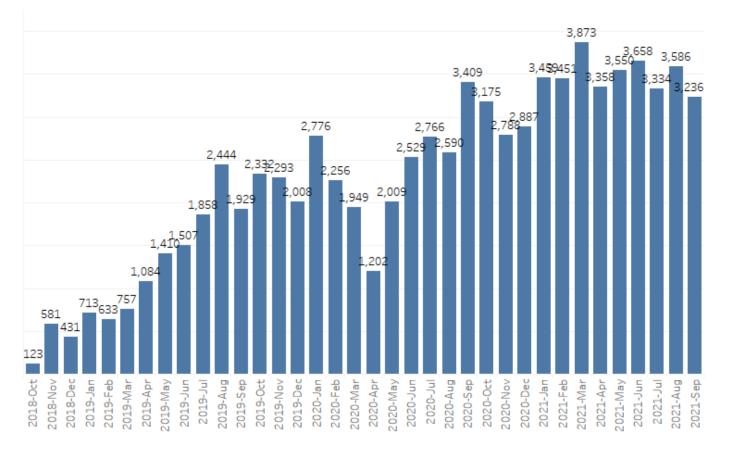

- Researchers evaluated psychiatric symptoms in 1,420 rural children ages 9-13 from 1993-200. Twenty five percent of study population was Native American
- Halfway through the study a casino opened giving each Native American an income supplement. This increase moved 14% of study families out of poverty, while 53% remained poor, and 32% were never poor. Incomes of non-Indian families were unaffected.'
- Psychiatric symptoms in children who were moved out of poverty dropped to the same level as children who have never been in poverty.
